Armistice Day Service To Be Held at Salvation Army Hall on Nov. 7

Canadian Legion Executive Accepts Invitation of Captain Hind to Hold Service on Thanksgiving Day

Following the announcement in last week's Journal that the Canadian Legion was discussing the holding of a memorial service to commemorate Armistice Day and to honor the memory of those who gave their lives in the Great War, Captain Hind, officer in charge of the local corps of the Salvation Army, attended an executive meeting of the Legion and invited the members to hold the service at the Army Hall. Further details of the program will be announced by the committee in charge.

In connection with the sale of poppies, Miss Dunlop, of Central school teaching staff, has volunteered the assistance of a number of G.I.T. Girls, and they will likely be appointed in teams and a thorough canvass of the town made so that every person will have the opportunity to purchase a poppy.

These poppies sold by the Canadian Legion are made by the "Veteral" factories, which employ disabled returned men, so that in purchasing a poppy you are not only honoring the brave souls who laid down their lives but are helping the living as well who have suffered from the ravages of war.

The local branch of the Legion will also have on sale wreaths made by the "Veteral" factories, for placing on the graves of deceased soldiers or to be hung in schools or lodges rooms on the anniversary of the Armistice. These cost from $1.00 to $5.50, and P. Smith, the secretary of Coleman branch, would be pleased to fill the orders of those requiring wreaths.

Forestry Patrols Inestimable Value to Canada's Timber Wealth

Summer of 1927 Has Seen Almost Complete Absence of Loss From Forest Fires in Crow's Nest Pass District-- Work of Forest Rangers Requires Constant Vigilance to Protect Immense Wealth

The past season has been very free from forest fires, in fact it was stated recently by the Blairmore Enterprise that not for twenty years has the Crow's Nest Pass been so free from the smoke of forest fires as during the summer just closed.

Though the rainy weather has helped to prevent forest fires, there is another factor which is very effectively helping to reduce the fire losses each year and that is the Dominion Forestry Service. Harry Boulton, the ranger in charge of the area of which Coleman is the centre, states that during the time he has been in charge here it is surprising to what extent the bare places have been reforested by natural process, and that it has been a continual source of interest to watch small trees make remarkable growth each season, comparing them to the rapidity with which children attending school grow up and before one realizes that time is passing so quickly they are adults ready to take their places in the world.

It may be surprising to many to know that in this vicinity there are trees upwards of 300 years old, proof of this being established by the number of rings counted in the trunks of trees after they have been cut. These have escaped the general destruction caused by forest fires which have swept the mountains of the Crow's Nest Pass district, though many of these older trees show signs of having been scorched. To be of use for the lumber industry, trees require to be at least 150 to 175 years old, states Mr. Boulton, so that it will at once become apparent that destruction of trees by forest fires is a very serious loss and one which takes a century or more to replace.

By a continual policy of warning tourists and the public generally of the dangers of forest fires, and by newspaper and poster advertising campaigns, the disastrous losses

Coming Attraction

An attraction that will attract unusual attention is that of "The Flag Lieutenant," a spectacular, romantic drama of the British Navy. It is a British production, produced with the co-operation of the British Navy, and is announced as the greatest all-British picture ever made. It is indeed a stellar attraction, and will be shown here on Nov. 4 and 5.

R. Bennett Elected Leader at National Cons. Convention

Honor of Party Leadership Comes to This Province by Overwhelming Vote

The national convention of the Conservatives in Winnipeg voiced its approval of Hon R. B. Bennett as the leader of the party in a manner that left no doubt whatever as to who was the popular choice, for he registered 780 votes, the nearest to him being Hugh Guthrie with 320. The total votes cast were 1554, divided among six contestants, Bennett, Guthrie, Calam, Marion, Rogers and Drayton. The count shows Bennett taking more than half the total vote, and is a striking tribute to the qualities of the Calgary lawyer for the leader ship.

Town Band Is Re-organized

Welcome News is That Sweet Melody Will Again Float O'er the Town--A. Morris is the New Leader

It is very welcome news to the people of Coleman to learn of the town band being reorganized, a meeting having been held on Tuesday evening in the council chamber, when a number of enthusiasts were present and A. Morris, sr., was appointed as the leader of the band. Fifteen members were present, and it is safe to say that in a very short time their presence will be made very evident by their programme on the street, as they state they intend to give open air concerts as often as possible, weather permitting.

The band invites anyone able to play to join them. Practices are to be held every Tuesday and Friday evening in the council chamber. It should receive the encouragement and support of the people of Coleman, for a band is an asset which many towns of the size of Coleman would indeed be very pleased to possess.

MEXICO STILL IN THROES OF SERIOUS REVOLT

Mexico City.—The sanguine roll of the dead in the revolution, extending through Mexico, but despite summary retribution exacted by the Government, reports from many points indicated a continuance of revolutionary movements.

General Alfredo Quijano, commander of cavalry in the Mexico City garrison, was taken virtually from the court-martial chamber in which he was convicted to face a firing squad.

General Alfredo Quijano was also captured. The general was convicted of leading his troops in a rebellion against the Government, after an eight-hour trial, was shot by a firing squad in the courtyard of the San Lazaro military prison.

In Morelos, 13 members of the State Legislature were shot as sympathizers of the Gomez-Serrano revolt.

Despatches to the American border announce that the Mexican treasury had called upon fiscal agents throughout the Republic to contribute available funds to the capital to meet the increased expenses of military operations.

Mexican naval vessels at Vera Cruz prepared to depart on an unannounced mission.

Railroad rolling stock has been concentrated around Vera Cruz, for the use of the military in operations towards Orizaba, indicating a new focal point of unrest there, and disruption of traffic on the Mexican railway has been heightened by the incursion of a rebel group at Puebla.

Should a Retail Store Advertise?

"Every merchant in business knows right down in his heart and soul that to be successful he must advertise," states a writer in the Dealer Service Bulletin, and he goes on to say:

"Gone forever are the days when you could sit back and feel that if there was any business to be had you would get it. More sales outlets are dividing the market. Mail order houses are shipping goods into your community. What are you going to do about it?

"You may laugh and say, 'I'm all right, my old customers won't forget me.' Listen, Mr. old time operator, do you know that every one of your customers is being hit and again, left and right, by some other fellow's advertising. Here's another point. You may have a number of old customers but you haven't got enough. Business conditions today are forcing you to take a lower margin of profit. To get the same dollars and cents profit out of your business, you must increase your volume and increase your turnover. Your old customers only represent so much business to you. Where are you going to get the rest of it? The answer is new customers. How are you going to get new customers? Advertising offers a solution.

"Advertising isn't a currell. Advertising cannot make a new purchaser of your goods a regular customer. Advertising is only one link in the chain and it would be foolish to strengthen the advertising link if the links of salesmanship, shop equipment, personnel, appearance and location are weak.

"Take an inventory of your business. Check up the sales efforts of yourself and your staff. Imagine that you are a customer and study the appearance and location of your place with his critical eye. Inspect your shop equipment. Analyze the service you are prepared to render. When all these vitally important factors unite to form a well regulated establishment then and only then, are you ready to call into play that essential servant of modern merchandising—Advertising.

"To stay in business a retail merchant must advertise. Otherwise the only new customer will be the bailiff when he comes to put the sign up above your door."

Meighen Startles Them

At the Conservative convention this week Hon. Arthur Meighen, former premier of Canada and leader of the Conservative party, shook the gathering possibly as no other speaker could have done when he vindicated his Hamilton address of over two years ago dealing with the subject of permitting the people of Canada to vote as to the participation of Canada in wars in which the British Empire may become involved.

Meighen is noted as a man who will not stoop to political knavery to gain his ends. He is not a vote-catcher, and does not trim his sails to every passing wind. In fact possibly his steadfastness to his own convictions along political lines has cost him the allegiance of many who believe in a policy of compromise, but to those who believe in a man standing four square on any public or private question, Meighen's sterling qualities will appear stronger than ever.

There are altogether too many who would betray their friends for a personal advantage in the political world, which has had the effect of keeping many keen business men out of the field completely.

The 'I don't know' variety of people are a drag on the wheels of progress. They are hurdles in the way of better things.

Hillcrest Young People Meet

A splendid representation of the young people of Hillcrest United church met on Monday evening for the first of their weekly meetings, which was of a devotional nature. Devotional exercises were led by Mr. Taylor, following which items of business were disposed of. Singing rounds then amused the young folks, after which games were indulged in. A very successful and profitable evening terminated with refreshments.

There were 46 who became members and paid their monthly dues.

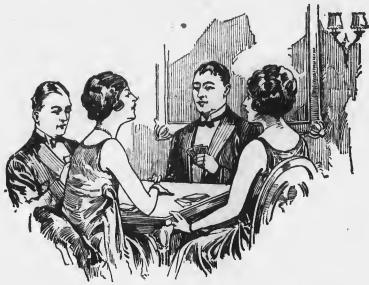

The next meeting will be held on Monday next and will be of a musical nature.

Church Nicely Decorated

The harvest festival service on Sunday evening was characterized by bright and hearty singing of the well-known harvest hymns, and the congregation, which filled the church so that chairs had to be used in addition to the regular seating accommodation, joined heartily in the service. A very festive appearance was given to the church by the decorations consisting of flowers, fruit, vegetables and other fruits of the harvest, kindly donated by church members.

The special preacher for the occasion was the Rev. V. S. Lord, of Brocket, he speaking particularly on the results of the harvest, and reminding his hearers that we had cause for great thankfulness.

To add to the interest of the musical portion of the service, two or three were splendidly given by Mr. Arthur Hadwell, of Bellevue, and a soprano solo entitled "My Task" by Mrs. Asbridge.

Accidental Death Verdict on Corbin Mite Explosion

The inquest into the deaths of W. Wanhill and Tom Ratcliffe was held last week, Coroner Murray, of Natal, taking charge of affairs.

Quite a number of witnesses testified to different phases of the accident, among whom were Mr. Warburton, mine superintendent, Walter Almond, overman; Mr. Cummings, fire boss; A. Grieve, lampman. The case was watched very closely by the government mine inspectors, Dickson, Strachan and MacDonald. It appears that Tom Ratcliffe, omitted to take a safety lamp into the mine with him, with which it is the custom to test for gas in the mine.

The verdict of the jury was that the deceased came to their deaths from the result of a shot being exploded in deadly gas in or near No. 8 chute in 6 crosscut.

The jury consisted of D. Robertson, J. Dornan, J. Press, W. Reid, J. Woods and W. Daniels.

A Chapter of Mishaps

Two young men left town on Saturday morning shortly after break o'clock to visit friends some distance down the line. Though starting out under the most promising auspices, fine weather, car hitting on all four, and themselves feeling fit as the proverbial (whatever that may mean) mishap numbered one occurred at Blairmore, when bang—away went a tire and inner tube, requiring its replacement. Everything being put into shape again, another start was made, when after a few miles of travelling something began to splutter under the hood, and after some funny noises which made them wonder if it would continue its journey, they decided that prevention was better than cure, and would stop at the next garage. Here it was found that the valves needed a little grinding if that car was to function properly. The remedy being applied, they again started to reach their destination or die in the attempt. Before nightfall they arrived, and after appeasing their hunger, they slept the sleep of the just and the tired. Sunday was spent in friendly visits, and all was made ready for the start home late in the evening, when what up till then had been a fine night changed into a very wet one, with the result that it was impossible to start. Next morning an attempt was made, but after half a mile of ploughing the mud, one of the two decided he would ride the 25 miles to the rail way station on a horse's back, while the other has not been heard of up to the time this was written.

St. Alban's Church

Sunday, Oct. 19, will be observed as Children's Day Practice for the children's service will be held on Friday at 7 p.m. Parents are asked to make a special effort to attend the service on Sunday.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 a.m.

Mr. Currie wishes to thank all who helped in making the harvest festival service such a bright one.

PAINTED FIRES

BY NELLIE L. MCCLUNG

"Shut up, Rose! They'll hear us!" Hess nothing! He's dead—dead, the best man God's sun ever shone on—murder!—murder—murder!" Rose wrung her hands dramatically in imitation of Mrs. Wymuth, while the girls chattered with laughter. Then she cackled round the room, singing "I'm a little wrinkled prune, I am not staved yet but will be soon."

Minnie held her letter rapturously in her hands. She could not wait it before the girls. Waiting her chance she stole out into the long, unoccupied hall where she ran along in her feet until she reached the linen closet. There she found the switch and turned on the light, trembling with excitement.

A great cry broke from Minnie's lips as she read—a cry of joy—for her mother loved her still, loved and believed in her and would stand by her to the end. There was a dolorous bill in the letter, and a whole row of kisses, and many a word of loving comfort. Minnie ran back to get Helm, who was showing the girls what had happened. Her English had deserted her, but she showed them the first few lines so they had a few minutes when we all just prayed for you, and the girls said "Keep Helm cheerful—let her learn English fast—and let her keep someone every day—and keep her out of her heart!" I wrote them down so I could tell you, and then we sat together, "Dear Lord, do not let Helm ever forget that she is dear to Thee." We know, dear Helm, that you will always be pure and brave and true to your family and your work and your friends, and do not let your surroundings affect you. Make the best of them, remember the love of thy God, and help to help someone else. I am enclosing some stamp and paper. Write to me, or get some of the girls to write. Miss de Forest is living with me now, and she wants to hear from you.

"For lovingly yours,
Edna Rodgers."

Helm turned the light out when her work was done, but lingered at the window to watch the city below, with its myriad of twinkling lights, row upon row, making weirdly beautiful figures as the wheels of the streetcars turned with its melody of tramming feet. Her purring eyes changed, racing train whistles, that seemed to rise in ever widening circles of sound. She loved to listen to the murmur that rose and fell, swelled and lessened. Something coming louder—louder—louder—bursting—panting—fading—gone.

The sleepless, restless, shifting city!

She loved it, she was part of it. Away over there where the reflection of her lights paled in the sky, she had friends.

There were people who thought of her, and would be glad to see her Helm loved it; was it her city?

"They would know. When she shut her eyes she could see the broad spread of Mr. Wymuth's pale cheeks and his grey hair. His Wymuth came words, and the sharp, crackling and snap-crackling. She was sorry for that, and would write to Miss Abbie about breaking the glass. Miss Abbie would pay the damages.

The glass should be gathered up—glass was sharp to walk on and made quick cuts in feet. Helm slipped steadily from her bed. The girls were all asleep now. Noisily, she went down stairs and across the room, closing the door before she switched on the light. The chair which Mr. Wymuth had fallen against still lay on its side. Helm lifted it up and set the room to rights. Then she began to pick up the pieces of glass, very careful to make no noise. At the blood-stains on the floor she shuddered—it was surely a dreadful thing to shed blood, she hoped. Mr. Wymuth had not had any.

"The world outside. Helm could not make herself feel very sorry. The exquisite thrill of power which she felt when she saw him thrown from her was still like wine—it was glorious! Helm could have written a psalm of elation!" Now like my head lifted up above my enemies . . . they are as chaff that the wind driveth away.

"Then prepared a table before him.

"She wanted to sing; she marched to the piano, sang a few bars, then bent her head low in a dark room, her broad and water-like hair which had already done to Rose Lamb, she could bear it. She had the memory of this glorious victory, the joy of sealing the keys—and beat of all her letters.

The Advance Of Science

Believes That a Fast Future Awaits Further Investigation

That a "new science" has taken its place among the classic sciences" is the conclusion of Prof. Charles Richet, of Paris, widely known physiologist, in reviewing the result of the international congress of physics research just closed.

"For a long time yet," he writes in Le Journal, "there will be contests and contradictions, but when science has not passed through these phases of hesitation and error? We are now aware that there are indications other than those we know of today."

He believes nothing, or almost nothing, of the immense universe which encircles us, which quivers around us quite close to us. Who knows if it is not going to modify our existence, our conception of life and even our ideas of human society.

"But we shall not allow ourselves to be misled. We shan't take smoke for the flame. The next congress at Athens in 1930 will bring us fresh documents. A vast future opens to us in the next quarter century."

"I will follow the upward road today. I will keep my face to the light; I wish that bright thoughts as I go my way.

I will do what I know is right; I will look for the flowers by the side of the road,

I will laugh and love and be strong;

I will try to lighten another's load.

This day I fare alone."

"I will go on," he says. "See, Helm, you've done all these. You hardened my hand when you got my letter for me, ain't that so?"

Helm nodded; that part was all right, but she was worried about Mr. Wymuth. Would pangs driven by the love of a woman sustain her in knocking down the Superintendent of the Girls' Friendly Home? that was the question.

Minnie searched the book again, again, again, each line. "No, it wasn't exactly looking for flowers by the side of the road" — but look here! I will laugh, and love, and be strong!"

"Helm," cried Helm, "it's here! You were strong when you hit him—that covers it, Helm, ain't you glad?"

Helm took the book and followed the line with her finger. "I sure was strong!"

The house was silent—so still it seemed as if it had stopped breathing—but the girl sat and waited, her eyes at rest over what she had written, alternating between the excitement that the letters from her friends had brought her, the happiness that had come to poor little troubled Minnie, the assurance of the Blue Book, and a deep sorrow for what she had done. What a very terrible thing she wondered. She recalled the sudden rage that ran like fire through her veins when Mr. Wymuth had shaken her. Should she have just borne it and made no resistance? She would get Minnie to write it all to Miss Rodgers and Miss de Forest.

"I have no pleasure in violent expressions everywhere I go," she said.

Monday night, with its brilliant moonlight, was one of those ideal nights which we often read of yet seldom experience. It was indeed one of those nights on which a young man (or woman) might be pardoned if their thoughts turned to love.

The snow-capped mountains showed in clear relief against the sky, and from several miles eastward down the pass, Crow's Nest mountain could be seen as clear and distinct as by day, rearing its dome in majesty over all surrounding peaks.

It emphasized the name it has been so well given as "The Sentinel of the Pass." It was indeed a mountain scene that any artist or movie picture director would find difficult to reproduce, the beauty of the scene being beyond description in mere words, and the grandeur so impressive as to fire the imagination.
